Description of the site design

ANCLAR – Travel Agency

Our website consists of 8 pages.

Home page has the buttons to follow different pages of a site on the top. It also has six photos which are the links to the destination description page. The main page has a different header on purpose, as we wanted the user to know they are on the welcoming page. It has a nice quotation, which the user sees only ones, not to be distracted from booking a tour.

5 Packages (Countries to travel to).

-The pages includes an overview of six countries, a list of the top places to visit, the transport options, an area with gallery including pictures of those top places to visit, the pricing of places to go, ratings of previous customers and a link to redirect you to the contact us page and to book a tour.

Contact Us: Will ask you for name, phone number, subject, and a message so you can write down the information you are wondering about. This message will be sent to us once you click the 'send' button.

About Us: Explain details about the travel agency and invite the users to join us going around the places to enjoy what we have enjoyed.

Developers pages:

An about the developers page with the names, student numbers and breakdown of the work carried out by each student.

In addition, we would like to mention the name origin. AN is for Anna, CL is for Claudia, AR is for Arthur. And in common it sounds like an anchor, which is a very vacational word.

Research

We used the following web-sites to find more information about the countries:

<https://www.lonelyplanet.com/mexico>

<https://www.britannica.com/place/Italy>

<https://www.getyourguide.com/italy-1169011/>

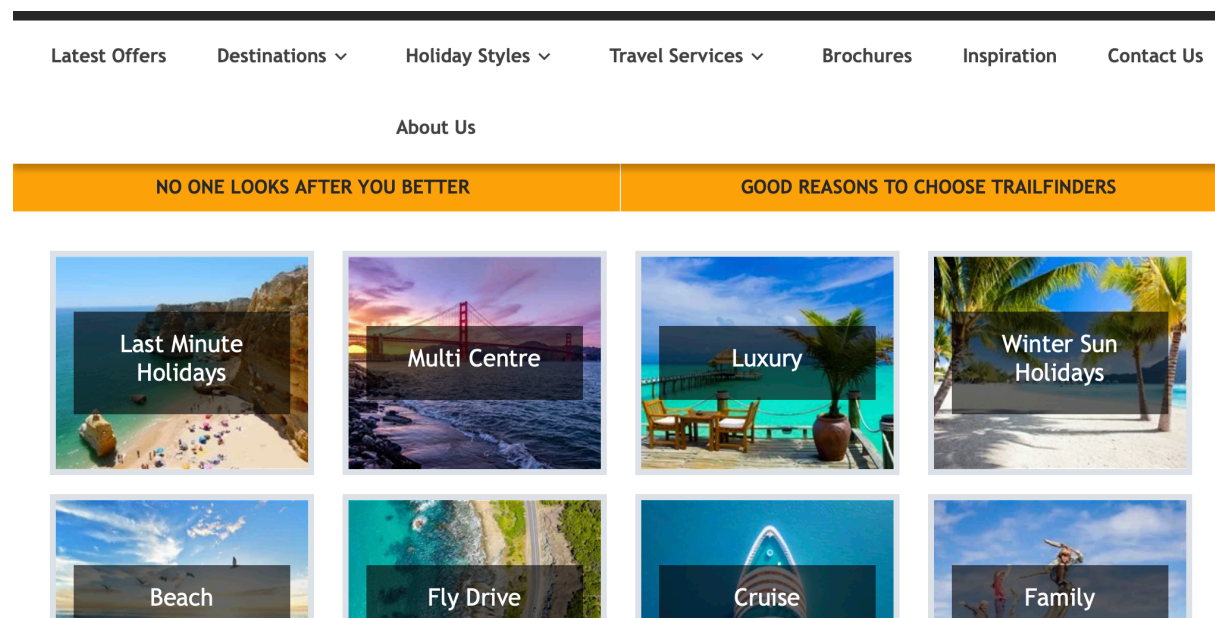

<https://www.thetravel.com/things-to-do-in-milan-complete-guide/>

<https://www.visitmorocco.com/en>

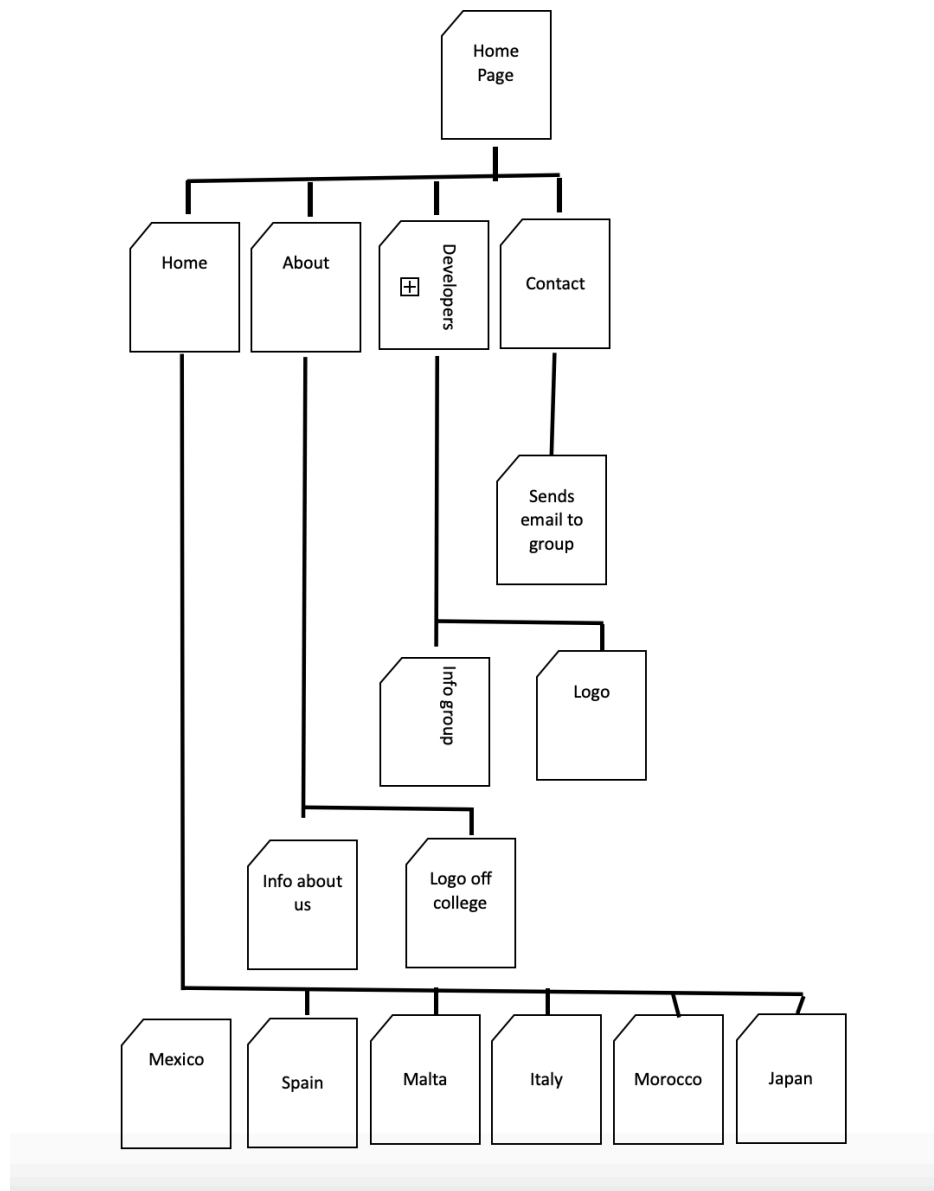

<https://www.visitmalta.com/en/>

Also the information was taken from our personal experience. Each of us wrote about a visited country. And each of us shared personal photos.

As we were making the research for inspiration, we came to conclusion that mostly all agency sites are quite similar to one another. For example, here is a layout, which looks like ours:

Review

As a group of three, we split the work the next way:

Anna has made the main page with photos and links to other pages of a site and the «About Us» page with information about the agency.

Claudia has made the «Contact Us» page with a questionnaire for customers and a «Developers» page about us as students working on this project.

Arthur has made several skeletons for a country page. We were choosing between two, to know which one looks better. And the chosen skeleton was used in each destination page on a site.

Each member of a group wrote a piece of text about their countries and gathered the photos.
